TO: Training Officers of the Clandestine Services

COUNTERINTELLIGENCE OPERATIONS COURSE

The Counterintelligence Operations course will begin on Tuesday, 9 June instead of Monday, 8 June as originally announced. It will end on Monday, 29 June.

The course is a three-week program which runs full-time the first five days and part-time (until 1:00 P. M.) thereafter. It will be given in Room 503 Broyhill. Enrollment is limited to 15. Some spaces are still available. (Note: This is the last CI Ops course until late September 1964.)

To assist Training Officers in selecting employees to attend the June course, the following is a summary of the scope of instruction:

The counterintelligence mission and function in CIA and in the U. S. intelligence community.

Liaison with domestic agencies and foreign services.

Soviet intelligence and security services (KGB and GRU), their operations against legal residencies, and Soviet illegals.

Communist Chinese intelligence and security services.

The dynamics of communist intelligence and security services, common interests and aims.

(see other side.)

The international Communist movement, its operations and our operations against it; penetrations of and defections from communist parties.

The services of selected friendly and neutral countries, security problems, their relations with us.

Counterintelligence operations, double agents, penetrations.

25X1C

CI information support, records retrieval, and information collation by computers.

CI elements in counterinsurgency; CI in contingency and war planning; legal problems and responsibilities in CI.

The last morning of the course a senior member of the CI Staff will answer questions prepared by the students, and there will be a general discussion of CI policy and practices in CIA.
